City of San Fernando, La Union – To ensure transparency and set out accountability in the use of public funds, the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) Region 1 intensifies its efforts to monitor the 2013-2015 Bottom-Up Budgeting (BuB) projects.

The DILG R1 taps citizens and civil society groups to take part in the monitoring and evaluation of BuB projects to ensure improved and faster project implementation. The monitoring efforts come in two (2) modalities: posting of BuB tarpaulins and conduct of citizen-led monitoring and evaluation scheme where members of civil society organizations (CSOs) were equipped how to monitor and report the status of BuB projects.

“We want every resident to know the BuB projects being implemented by different agencies in their locality and how much is being spent for each of them. All the relevant information about these projects are contained in tarpaulins posted conspicuously in every local government unit in the Region”, said DILG Officer-In-Charge Julie J. Daquioag.

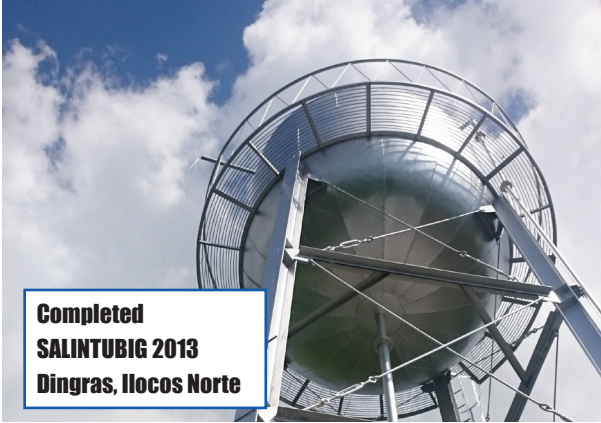

The DILG funded the posting of BuB tarpaulins as a means of informing the public of the program and the description, location, amount, implementing agency, and status of the BuB projects in a locality.

Aside from the posting of BuB tarpaulins, DILG R1 also oriented 10 CSO representatives from each of the nine (9) cities and 116 municipalities in the region on the monitoring and reporting of the BuB projects.

“Based on experience, the involvement of the civil society groups never fails to challenge and expedite the completion and proper administration of programs and projects at the local level. We need our CSOs to ensure that funds are spent where they are supposed to be spent and projects are implemented as planned”, stressed by OIC Daquioag.

The 10 trained CSOs comprised the Local Monitoring Team which gathered the relevant data using the monitoring tools through interviews and focus group discussions with the beneficiaries of BuB projects. The Team prepared the assessment or monitoring report which shall be presented to the Local Poverty Reduction Action Team chaired by the Local Chief Executive and Co-Chaired by a CSO representative.
